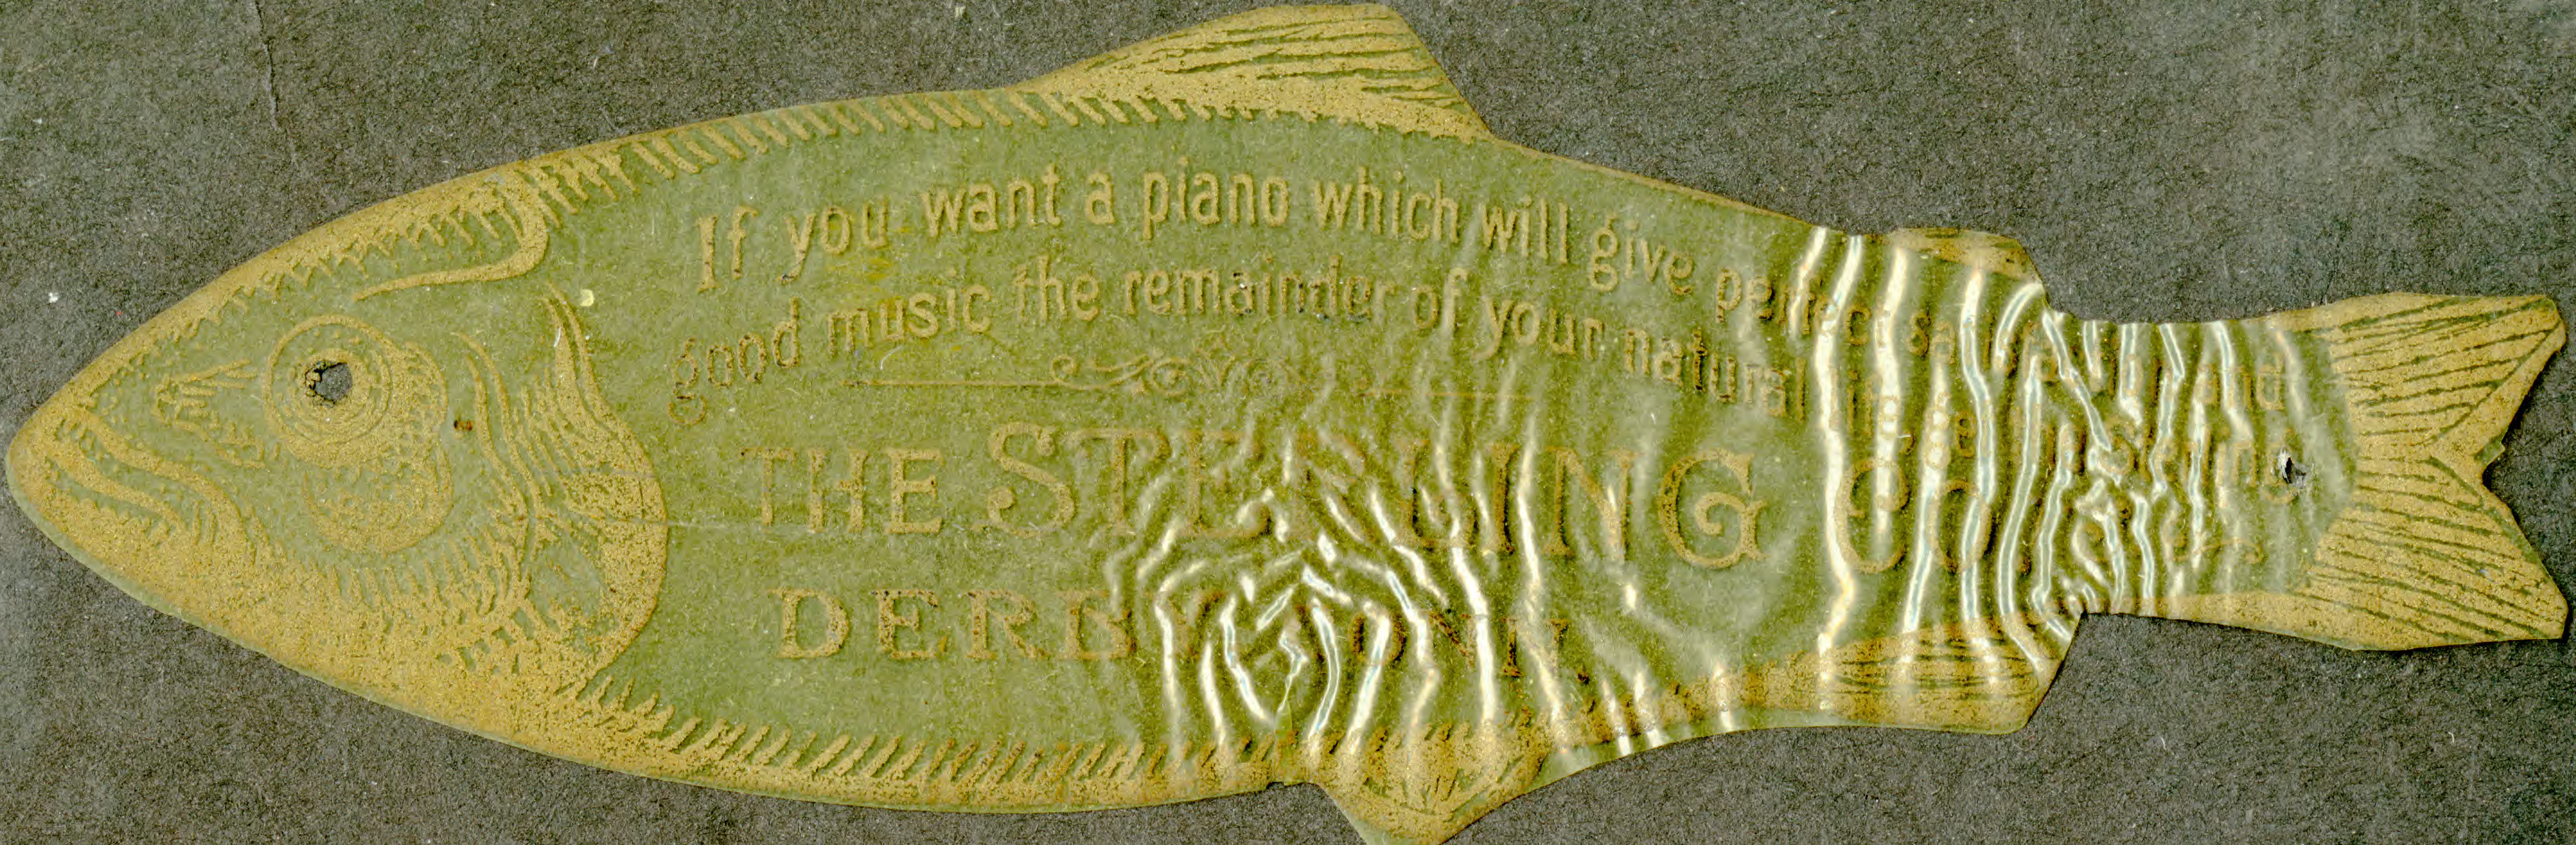
1924

F. A. Wetmore, North Freedom, Wis.

1903.

512 North Henry St.
Madison,
Wis.

Martin Mfg. Co
180 W. Madison st
Chi.



If you want a piano which will give perfect satisfaction and good music the remainder of your natural life [illegible]

THE STERLING Co.

DERBY, CONN.

in looking at the looking glass room to see how large it was. Frequently he rubbed his face across the glass trying to get inside.

Then I put in a ballon a string but he would not touch it or go near it because it moved.

He went went down in the hole and brought out a Sparrow. he pulled the wing feathers out one by one before eating. Then he pulled off pieces and swallowed them until all were gone. Every squeak and rustle was listened to intently.

1914

December 27, Sunday.

This morning Art Ruddy and I went down the track over towards Rob Dickies. We saw a Shrike light in a tree in the middle of a field. I started after it but it flew on farther and I lost sight of it.

A flock of about twenty-five Red Crossbills flew over to the south west. I shot at them without effect.

Went over in Stevens Creek valley. Shot a female White-breasted Nuthatch that had the whole top of the head the same color as the back.

A Red-bellied Woodpecker lit in a tree. I shot it but 1904.

January.

January. 9, Saturday.

Today it was warm and sunny and it seemed almost like the beginning of Spring. The birds felt it also and showed it in notes and actions.

The Hairy and Downy Woodpeck were drumming in all directions and the dry resonant rattle was enough to stir any one up. The Hairy Woodpeckers gave the customary mating notes and were very noisy.

Art, Rudy and I went down the track to Skutz Creek. The south slopes were warm and pleasant and it seemed almost impossible that spring was not coming in two or three weeks. The Red squirrels were out and stirring around more than they usual all vacation.

The Bluejays were very noisy. While sitting on a log I saw one back of me and by good luck shot it. Another immediately lit above where it lay and I shot it but only winged it. I found the first one easily enough but the other

PROGRESS TRADE MARK 3290

Miller and Wood
731 Seventh Ave.
N.Y.

Pol. Econ.	Room K
German	Room C
Latin	Room 7.